E3 2009i OCLC Number: (OCoLC)468817410 Subject: Education -- Effect of technological innovations on -- United States. Excerpt: . . . 11 our country. I am pleased to share my experiences on the role of technology and innovation in demonstrating meaningful progress against these challenges as we look to the future of learning. A Framework for Educational Innovation President Obama is committed to ensuring all students are trained to use tech-nology to research, analyze and communicate in any discipline. However, we must integrate technology into the classroom in ways that research demonstrates truly help students learn. Promising approaches include facilitating public-private partnerships in the devel-opment of new curriculum incorporating emerging technologies; integrating tech-nology throughout the classroom to transform the method by which we teach; de-ploying collaboration tools to support teachers in sharing best practices; and devel-oping better student assessments to allow teachers and parents to make data-driv-en decisions on how to improve performance. We are making progress on these priorities and we will continue to evaluate their impact. Were also proud of OECDs recent ranking of the US as 1 in broadband access to schools as it has built upon the 2. 25 billion annual contribution through the E-rate program. Ive seen the promise of an investment in technology as Virginias Secretary of Technology. When properly deployed, it can serve as the foundation for technology-led educational transformation. With your permission, I thought to share a few ex-amples from nearly a dozen innovative proof-of-concept initiatives that might bet-ter demonstrate the future of learning. Virginias Physics Flexbook: In 2007, Governor Kaine challenged a volunteer panel of scientists and engineers to review our physics, chemistry and...
