Excerpt: . chapter iv output we have given in the preceding chapter such particulars relating to the working of a colliery as are in our opinion absolutely necessary to be known before it is possible to understand the present position as regards output. These particulars have been made as simple and few as possible, because it is not the purpose of this book to explain how coal is got. It is rather one of its purposes to show why so little coal is being got to-day and how by some means or other that low productivity must cease if the nation s industries are ever to regain their pre-war prosperity. We shall consider the matter from three points of view: (1) loss of output due to loss of time; (2) loss of output due to lack of intensity of effort in the time actually worked; (3) loss of output due to material difficulties and the insufficient use of mechanical appliances. We shall also have occasion to point out the special problems presented by the peculiar circumstances induced by the war which still affect the production of coal, not only in this but in other countries also, 79 holidays, the average tonnage of coal raised per hundred shifts for the same period being: -- The loss of time during the period under review, due to transport difficulties, was as follows: --Time Lost Due To Transport Difficulties This question of loss of time through transport difficulties requires explanation,...
